Description

Auto look for home introduction

The Carrera EVOLUTION Ford GT Race Car No. 67 is a scale model of the Ford GT racing car. The Ford GT was the last car produced by the Detroit automobile manufacturers to compete in the legendary long-distance race in northern France for a while. The number 67 is a reference to the famous racing car driven by Gurney and Foyt, the 1967 Ford MK IV. The striking red and white livery guarantees this GT the full attention of every spectator. The elegant 656-hp sports car was sold in a strictly limited edition by the manufacturers, Chip Ganassi Racing, and came to dominate long-distance racing.

Fixed-Rot head-turner

The 1:32-scale Ford GT also attracts stars as it flies around the bends of home-based slot racing circuits. The official Ford reproduction license enables the slotcar to be built to almost perfectly replicate every detail of the original. The replica is fitted with working front and rear lights. The Carrera car can be refitted for right-hand with a digital decode and guarantees genuine racing fun for everyone.
