Description

The British Grand Prix was held on July 18, 1976, in Kent. The battle on the race track was fierce with Nelson Piquet leading off against James Hunt. During the race, Lauda's teammate Piquet decided to gain the upper hand due to Hunt's poor start and accidentally dislodged Lauda's vehicle, sending him careening into the barriers and breaking his wheels.

Piquet was then hit by several cars, and Hunt's McLaren was eliminated from the race, so he returned to the pits to claim his spare race, but due to official intervention it was determined that racers could only race in the car they started with and so Hunt climbed back into the McLaren and was determined to finish the race.

Lauda and Hunt ended up in a hair-raising battle on the track, trading each other, but on the 40th lap, Hunt blazed past his competitor, partly due to a faulty gearbox on Lauda's car from Piquet's impact. The P34 Tyrrell, driven by Schecter was in 4th place, and with Piquet out of the way managed to obtain the last spot in the podium.

Piquet's career following the race due to the appeals from other teams claiming that it was unfair for Hunt to have been allowed to compete given his poor start at the beginning of the race and the fact that he hadn't even completed the first lap, Hunt was disqualified, and Lauda took 1st place with Schecter in 2nd place, and John Watson taking 3rd.

This impressive 1976 British GP Triple Pack features 3 beautifully constructed slot cars from Scaletric based on the McLaren M23, the McLaren 312T, and the Tyrrell P34.
