Description

On the 21st of March 1780, The young Marguerite de La Fayette embarked on the Hermione, sailing sail for America to fight alongside the American insurgents in the struggle for their independence. Two years earlier, at the Rocherfort Arsenal, in a building berth close to the Confiance Royale, work had begun on the Hermione, a light 12-pounder frigate, over 55m long, weighing in at more than 1,200 tons and with a sail surface of over 1,500m2 spread on the three masts. The Hermione was built from plans drawn up by the engineer-shipbuilder Chevillard l'Aîné.
